

"Captive Audience"

Captive Audience Screening Gallery is a small scale art space located in my studio in McKinley Park. It is tucked away in a private warehouse where you must be let in and guided to the gallery, therefore I will personally walk each visitor in and out, in groups, at designated times.

From 2005 to 2009, I was a student at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Although I didn't originally enter school to study art, the faculty and teaching graduates soon changed my mind. When I realized I had the option to take classes part time my last two years or graduate early, I opted instead to become a double major and remain a full time student for all four. This show is an homage to my captures and our shared time.

Although these artists have since been spread out across the city and the world, their influence as a unit remains. For our inaugural show, Captive Audience proudly presents "Captive Audience".
